Kovels

Antiques and Collecting
by Terry and Kim Kovel

Q: I have a pen holder and clock that my father had in his office. They date from the early 1960s. Both items have an imprint of the earth, the clock has a GEMINI capsule that goes around. The pen holder has a circular image of the earth with a GEMINI capsule. When you push the pen down in its holder and release it, the capsule spins around. Is there any interest in items like these?

A: Desk accessories from the mid-20th century like pen holders and clocks usually sell for relatively low prices, but the connection to the GEMINI program should increase the value and amount of interest in yours.

The first GEMINI mission, an uncrewed flight, launched in 1964 and the final mission, GEMINI XII, which was the first spaceflight for pilot Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, took place in 1966. Plenty of merchandise celebrating the mission was produced at the time, and there is plenty of interest in it today. There are collectors who specialize in NASA and spaceflight memorabilia. Collectors of aviation memorabilia and space-themed toys are often interested as well.

Auction houses that deal in toys, popular culture, celebrity memorabilia and American history sell space memorabilia. The highest prices go to equipment from the programs, especially items flown in space, and items signed by or belonging to NASA staff or astronauts, but there is also interest in mass-produced souvenirs. Last year, a set of novelty salt and pepper shakers shaped like the GEMINI and Apollo capsules sold for $300 at Bid Again Auctions in support of the American Space Museum. ©2025 King Features

TIP: If there are raised applied decorations on your art glass, be careful when cleaning it. Gold or silver accents, painted enamel decoration, and beads must be kept in fine condition to maintain the value.

When "Skunked" Means Something Other Than Coming Home Empty-Handed

I bet you've heard the expression or maybe you've even used it yourself. Hunters and fishermen are notorious for answering the questions, "How did you do today?" or "Did you get anything?" with a quick response, "No, I got skunked." I've even heard it used a few times by avid sports fans when their favorite baseball, football, or hockey team got shut out and they've shared "We got skunked today." (As if they were actually on the field/rink and played an active part in the outcome.) Then there is the common phrase amongst fishermen who can't wait to catch the first fish of the day, no matter the species or size, just so they can "Get the skunk out of the boat." Let me tell you, in all these examples, "getting skunked" is a bad thing, but it can get a whole lot worse when the situation involves a real, live skunk!

In the spirit of upcoming Halloween, allow me to tell you a very scary story. In fact, it ranks up there amongst a lot of people's worst nightmares. What if it happens and I'm the one who has to deal with it? Let me set the stage. It was last week, Thursday night, October 16, 2025, to be exact. Back in mid-September I learned in a text that our two oldest children were planning on heading up to Cedar Point during one day of their HalloWeekends. They are both rollercoaster enthusiasts and Cedar Point is a top destination, calling itself "America's Roller Coast." Now, as a former paratrooper, I still get a rush of adrenaline from going up pretty high and coming down fast, so I expressed interest in joining them. Soon, the plans were made and the tickets were purchased online to make the trip on a Thursday evening when the park was open from 6 pm to midnight and hopefully, the crowds would be less on a school night.

We were several rides in and had already seen plenty of extensive Halloween displays and a few zombies wandering around in character, when the first text came in around 8:30 PM. We were standing in line at the Power Tower, which has options to be either launched 240 feet in the air or taken up 240 feet in the air before suddenly dropping. The kids read the text from my wife first. It was something most dog owners who live in the country have to deal with at some point in life and I know there are folks who live in the suburbs or even in town who have faced this horrible dilemma. Mary text that she had our German shepherd outside, he went around the back of the house, and he came back up between the house and our pole barn shaking his face. The reality hadn't hit yet. She opened the door, he started rubbing his face on the small area rug over the tile in our entryway, and the overwhelming odor hit! Saint had been skunked! He had tangled with a skunk and gotten himself sprayed. She immediately got the dog back outside and put him in the garage for the night, before taking that area rug and the doormat out on the front porch.

This wasn't our first skunked dog. Back in the Fall of 1992, our golden retriever Nugget got sprayed at point blank range on a Sunday evening when we lived in Kittanning. We had to drive 30-minutes over to Butler to buy several cans of tomato juice, so I could give her a tomato juice bath in our children's wading pool in the dark. It cut the smell somewhat, but I had to go to the Veterinarian's the next morning to buy two bottles of Skunk Be Gone to complete the cleaning process. It was the only night Nugget ever spent tied outside. Our previous German shepherd Colby didn't learn the first time he got sprayed at a distance. No, he had to get a solid stinky spray down in a second skunk encounter that I had to deal with.

Well, I learned several years ago from the Internet that a dependable homemade skunk spray remedy consists of one 24 oz. bottle of hydrogen peroxide, a ¼ cup of baking soda, and a ½ teaspoon of Dawn dish soap (which serves as a surfactant). I got home from Cedar Point at 2 AM Friday morning. Mary found four bottles of hydrogen peroxide in the house and set them inside the door. I mixed up a big batch in my pump sprayer with four bottles of hydrogen peroxide, 1 cup of baking soda, and 2 teaspoons of Dawn dish soap. At 2:30 AM, I was out in our driveway with the dog tied to the basketball pole, so I could thoroughly hose him down with the entire mixture. He got a fresh blanket to sleep on in the garage. Around 10 AM, after I had slept and made a trip for more hydrogen peroxide and baking soda, I mixed up another batch. This time the dog got his second dose and I also sprayed the area rug, door mat, and garage floor. Now Saint went out back in his pen to dry for several hours. Then he, the area rug, the door mat and the garage floor all got sprayed with one last mixture, comprised of one gallon of white vinegar and one gallon of warm water. The horrible smell was gone, the dog was allowed back in the house, and hopefully there won't be a next time. It was a dog owner's nightmare!

God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

DEAR PAW'S CORNER:
My cat "Jonesy" is 11 years old and has suddenly become a very picky eater. He is barely touching his dry kibble, and he will only eat canned pate or fresh chicken, shredded very fine. Is this something to be concerned about? - Martha Y., Tallahassee, Florida

DEAR MARTHA: Sudden, unexplained changes in a cat's behavior - especially around food - often signal a change in their health. Call the veterinarian and describe your cat's symptoms; the vet will likely ask you to bring Jonesy in for a look.

One possible cause is a dental infection. After age 4, more than half of cats begin to experience some degree of dental problems, like gingivitis, tooth infections and tooth resorption. Symptoms of dental disease include bad breath, excessive drooling, blood-tinged saliva, pawing at the face, dropping food from the mouth, lack of appetite and several more - all requiring a visit to the vet.

Your cat's vet will give him a complete physical exam to determine if something else is causing his lack of appetite, and will take a close look at his teeth. X-rays may be ordered to determine the extent of the problem.

If Jonesy's issue is an infection, antibiotics will be prescribed. If a tooth is involved, the vet will probably recommend pulling it; this is done under anesthesia, and will provide so much relief to your cat.

Once your cat has recovered, the vet will likely set up a toothbrushing routine - a finger brush and flavored toothpaste made just for cats work best. They may recommend a dry cat food that helps fight plaque buildup. There are many more preventive treatments available for pets today than in the past, so ask your vet how you can keep Jonesy happy and healthy through his senior years.

Our Daily Bread

No Longer a Foreigner

You are no longer foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with God's people. Ephesians 2:19
READ Ephesians 2:8-13, 17-22

"You don't belong here." Those words crushed an eight-year-old girl's heart, and the pain stayed with her. Her family had emigrated from a refugee camp in a war-torn country to a new country, and her immigration card had the word alien stamped on it. She felt like she didn't belong.

As an adult, although she put her faith in Jesus, she still felt alienated—stung by the feeling that she was an unwelcome outsider. While reading her Bible, she discovered the promises of Ephesians 2. In verse 12, she saw that old, troubling word alien. "You were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world" (nkjv). But as she kept reading, she saw how Christ's sacrifice had changed her status. She got to verse 19, which told her, "You are no longer" a foreigner or alien. She was a "fellow citizen" with God's people. Realizing that she was a citizen of heaven, she was overjoyed. Never again would she be an outsider. God had taken her in and accepted her.

Because of our sin, we're alienated from God. But we don't have to stay that way. Jesus brought peace to all who were "far away" (v. 17), making all who trust Him fellow citizens of His eternal kingdom—united as the body of Christ. By Dave Branon

REFLECT and PRAY

In what way do you feel alienated? What does it mean for you to know that God has called all His children to be united in Him?

Dear heavenly Father, thank You for allowing me to experience fellowship with You and with others who love and trust You.

Try This Zucchini Chile-Cheese Bake

Leaves that were green may be turning to brown, gold and red, but summer's growing season isn't over yet. Tall and free, sunflowers still climb upward like Jack's beanstalk. Their bright yellow blooms sway with afternoon breezes, crossing property lines and surpassing the heights of fences. They're so full of life and growth, and I recently observed a bright sunflower bold enough to peek into a second story window.

Lower to the ground, to accommodate my granddaughter's reach, a few cherry tomatoes ripen for her picking in our backyard. Lurking under a last pepper, three zucchinis are another happy discovery. Just what I need for this delicious, nutritious, family-style dish!

A last hurrah to the growing season, this Zucchini Chile-Cheese Bake with tomatoes and peppers is a healthy side for dinner or a hearty main vegetarian dish paired with a salad for lunch.

ZUCCHINI CHILE-CHEESE BAKE

Makes 8 servings

- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 3 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
- 2 cups sour cream
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1/4 cup green onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup red or green peppers, loosely chopped
- 7-1/2-ounce can diced green chiles
- 12 ounces Monterey jack cheese, shredded or thinly sliced in strips
- Handful of cherry tomatoes (about 8), sliced; or one large tomato, sliced
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper

To prepare oven and casserole: Preheat oven to 350 F. Butter a 3-quart casserole.

To prepare rice, zucchini, and sour cream mixture: Cook rice according to package directions. Meanwhile, in a saucepan, cook zucchini in water until tender, about 3-5 minutes. Drain. Or saute in olive oil, if you prefer.

In a small bowl, combine sour cream, garlic powder, salt, oregano, onions and chopped pepper.

To assemble: Spoon the cooked rice for a base layer in the casserole. Spread chiles evenly over the rice, then sprinkle half of the cheese. Place zucchini slices evenly over cheese, then add a layer of tomato slices.

Crack or sprinkle pepper over tomatoes. Spoon and spread sour cream mixture over tomato layer. Sprinkle remaining grated cheese or arrange strips over all.

To bake: Bake for 50 minutes uncovered. Let stand a few minutes.

To serve: Spoon freely out of casserole or cut into portions.

Now Here's A Tip by JoAnn Derson

- "Use purified water in your coffeemaker to lengthen its life. Water deposits build up and affect both the flavor and function of your machine. They can be cleaned, but it's much better if you use purified drinking water from a jug. It's very easy to fill the machine, too." – M.E. in Wyoming
- When you are frying up ground beef, add a tablespoon or two of water. It will help the excess grease pull away from the meat, making it easier to drain off.

Now Here's A Tip

by JoAnn Derson

• "That time of the year is almost here for us. You know, the time when running the heater gives the whole house the zaps. To keep our carpets from giving us static shock, we fill a water spray bottle with one part laundry softener and four parts water. Give the air and carpet a spritz, and it kills the zaps." – A.O. in Canada

• "Here's a fun game to help kids learn their sight words. BINGO! Make your own bingo cards with sight words in all the spaces. Use flash cards to call out the words, and the kids can mark them off as they hear them. We tape the bingo card to a small magnetic dry erase board, and the kids use refrigerator magnets to cover the words. We can use the boards over and over, really reinforcing the lesson. And it's fun!" – A.J. in Florida
