Kovels

Antiques and Collecting by Terry and Kim Kovel

Q: I found a silver link bracelet in my aunt's jewelry box after her death at age 93 in 2002, so I believe it's old and would like some idea of its value. I took it to a jeweler who used a loupe to look at the mark on the underside of the clasp. She said it read "JB" over "830S."

A: The first clue to the bracelet's value is the "830S." That is the silver content, meaning it is 83% silver and 17% alloy of other metals. The standard for sterling silver is 925, meaning 92.5% silver. While not sterling silver, 830 silver still has a relatively high silver content, and its higher percentage of alloy means it is more durable than 925 silver. The "JB" mark was used by John Baalerund, whose business operated from 1935 to 1988 in Oslo, Norway. He was known for his enameled silver jewelry. Silver jewelry by Scandinavian designers was extremely popular in the mid-20th century. Today, 830S silver bracelets from that period generally sell for about $50 to $150.

• TIP: Candle drippings can be removed from fabric with the help of ice cubes. Rub the wax with the ice until the wax hardens. Scrape off the hard wax with a credit card or stiff cardboard. If some wax remains, put a blotter over it, and then iron with a warm iron.

Make Kale Chips With Kids

Hail to kale! I'm not sure what brought the green, leafy, good-for-you veggie into such renown, but try to open a foodie magazine or blog without some recipe that bows to its virtues. I've been following the trend and now dutifully toss it into stir fries and salads. Sometimes I even let it stand alone all spiced up in our family's most recent obsession: kale chips.

While kale chip recipes abound, I found the best, foolproof technique from Tricia Cornell, mom of two, freelance writer and author of the new book "Eat More Vegetables: Making the Most of Your Seasonal Produce."

The cookbook is chock-full of easy-to-follow, family-friendly veggie recipes, such as her tasty take on "Squash Chili" and "Soupe au Pistou." True to form, she has the kale-chip-making technique down to a science. "When my kids clamor for kale chips, who am I to refuse?" she said as her son, Arlo, chopped up the kale, and her daughter, Nora, grated Parmesan for the chips that would accompany their hamburger sliders for supper. "I want the chips to be tasty and crispy every time we make them," she said.

Pick up a bunch at your local market and enjoy making and tasting these light, crunchy treats with your kids.

CHEESY KALE CHIPS

Makes 4 cups

- 1 large bunch kale (12 ounces); both Lacinato and curly kale work well.
- 1 tablespoon olive or canola oil
- 1/4 cup finely grated Parmesan
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or 1/2 teaspoon pepper flakes

Here's the fun: Heat oven to 400 F. Trim off the long, tough center stems from kale and discard. Slice leaves into 1- to 2-inch pieces and place in a large bowl.

Pour oil, cheese, salt and pepper over kale, and massage kale well with your hands, making sure that every piece is covered but not dripping with oil. Line 2 baking sheets with parchment paper and spread kale in a single layer. Place in oven and immediately reduce heat to 250 F.

Bake for about 20 minutes, until crisp, stirring kale and turning pans halfway through. It's important to keep an eagle eye toward the end; you want them to be crisp, not brown.

When completely cool, serve. If there are any leftovers, store in an airtight container up to three days.

Variation:

Barbecue Kale Chips

Omit Parmesan and pepper. Stir 1 teaspoon pimenton de la vera (smoked Spanish paprika) and 1/2 teaspoon sugar into the salt before adding.

Fun Fact

Japanese chefs consider Gomi (the Five tastes), Gos-hiki (the Five colors) and Goho (the Five cooking methods) to be the most important aspects of meal preparation. It is the chef's duty to make sure that everything creates a satisfying experience for those who are dining.

Outdoor Opportunities

By COL (Ret.) Grey D. Berrier II

With the Passing of Time, Even the Forest Changes Around Us

If I seem a little distracted while I write this piece on Mon., Dec. 1, there is a good reason. The tree service is here today to take down the big black cherry tree behind our house and currently two chain saws are running just outside, less than 60-feet away from my keyboard. The guy in the elevated bucket is operating one and another guy on the ground is cutting up the felled limbs, so they can go in the chipper. It's kind of appropriate to be serenaded by chain saw music, while I write about the forest and the trees.

This past Sat., the opening day of PA regular firearms deer season, I opted to hunt out of a familiar tree stand. As the darkness evaporated and first shooting light emerged, I quickly made an observation that I'm sure many other PA deer hunters also quickly recognized. This particular piece of Penn's Woods, which I would closely observe for the next 10.5-hours had changed some since I had last hunted there with a firearm in 2024. To the East, I previously had visibility for almost 100-yards, so I could see any deer moving through between my stand and a fence line on the neighboring property. Over time, the growth of young trees, shrubs, and brush have created a dense understory and reduced my visibility to approximately 70-yards. Thus, the deer now have a narrow 30-yard corridor hidden from view from my tree stand where they can slip into a thick mass of red brush and safely bed away from observation.

Natural forest succession is an ongoing process we can observe following any disturbance in the forest. This can be a selective timber harvest or clearcut, a wildfire, a windstorm causing numerous blowdowns, or possibly a tree disease or insect infestation causing canopy trees to die off, all potential causes of additional sunlight to reach the forest floor and allow rapid understory regrowth. Think about places you have hunted, hiked, camped, or repeatedly driven past over the years that have literally changed before your eyes as time elapsed. I can give examples (and I'm sure you can too) of smaller woodlots and much larger forest tracts that have evolved in species composition and tree density over time, so that they are definitely not the same as when you first started visiting that particular location. I can think of one specific 2014 selective timber harvest up in Venango County that encompasses over 300 acres on PA state forest land. From 2015 through 2019, there was ample cover from abundant slashings, good visibility, and it produced several deer harvests for me. In the past five years, the forest has vigorously regenerated to the point where the saplings now stand 10 to 15 feet tall and the thick pole density makes it extremely difficult to wade through the "sea of vegetation." The deer and other wildlife are using this dense growth for a bedding area and concealment when experiencing hunting pressure, but it has become a difficult place to hunt successfully. If you are a hunter, I'm sure you can think of places you are familiar with on PA state game lands, PA state forests, the Allegheny National Forest, privately owned timber company property, or other private landholdings where you have experienced similar changes over time.

With any change in the forest over time can come potential changes in deer behavior. This can be either beneficial or detrimental variations in their food sources, movement patterns, or bedding preferences. This is why hunters shouldn't assume the deer will always be found in the same places and move in the same patterns as they have in the past. Things change in the forest composition and hunters' tactics must also evolve to put them where the deer are now and not where they always were in the past. Probably, the most vivid example of this necessary change in hunter behavior to match forest composition comes from a friend who shared their 2023 opening day experience. He has a camp near Marienville and had been hunting the same parcel of the Allegheny National Forest for the past 20-years. He told me he would walk in on a forest service road for almost 3/10 of a mile before turning right at a clump of hemlocks and then follow the left bank of a small stream for another 1/4-mile before coming to a big oak by a large rock that was his consistent deer producing stand. However, in 2023 when he arrived at his parking spot in the darkness, he noticed a new gate and the forest road seemed to have been improved with gravel. When he walked in for a 1/4-mile, he was greeted by a 200-acre clearcut that completely altered his deer hunting.

Hunters and nonhunters have always been familiar with the Spring green-up reducing visibility and the Fall leaf-drop increasing visibility in the forest. Time elapses and forest structure changes in tree density and species composition. Beware of these not-so-subtle changes to maximize your visibility, shooting lanes, and hunting success. Hunters who adapt will fill tags!

God Bless, Be Safe, and Great Outdoors!

- Sea otters have the thickest fur of any mammal, at 1 million hairs per square inch.
- Hydrothermal vents created by fissures on the sea floor in areas of significant tectonic plate activity can pump out fluids at temperatures hot enough to melt lead.
- The Muppet vampire Count von Count, from "Sesame Street," was based on actual vampire myth. One way to supposedly deter the blood-sucking creatures is to throw seeds outside a door. Vampires are compelled to count the seeds, delaying them until morning.
- The Great Pyramid of Giza was the tallest structure in the world for more than 3,800 years.

Our Daily Bread

Good Reputation for Christ

Let your light shine before others, that they may see your good deeds and glorify your Father in heaven. Matthew 5:16
Titus 2:6-8

During his college days at Florida State University, Charlie Ward was a two-sport student athlete. In 1993, the young quarterback won the Heisman Trophy as the country's best college American football player, and he also starred on the basketball team.

During a pregame talk one day, his basketball coach used some foul language as he talked to his players. He noticed that Charlie "wasn't comfortable," and said, "Charlie, what's up?" Ward said, "Coach, you know, Coach Bowden [the football coach] doesn't use that kind of language, and he gets us to play awfully hard."

Charlie's Christlike character allowed him to gently speak to his basketball coach about this issue. In fact, the coach told a reporter: "It's almost as if there was an angel looking at you" when he talked to Charlie.

A good reputation with unbelievers and a faithful witness for Christ are hard to maintain. But at the same time, believers in Jesus can grow to be more like Him as He helps and guides us. In Titus 2, younger men, and by extension all believers, are called to "be self-controlled" (v. 6) and to "show integrity . . . and soundness of speech that cannot be condemned" (vv. 7-8).

When we live that way in Christ's strength, we'll not only honor Him but also build a good reputation. Then as God provides the wisdom we need, people will have reason to hear what we say. By Dave Branon

REFLECT and PRAY

How does a good reputation help you influence others? What will help you grow in Christlike character?

Dear God, please help me to grow in character that reflects You and honors You.

The Garden Bug

Planting dill and parsley

Dill plants do not transplant easily due to their long taproot; create a permanent bed by allowing dill to mature and self-seed over the long-term. To help establish, plant new seeds every few weeks to ensure an ample supply all summer and to prepare for pickling season. Parsley is rich in vitamins and minerals and adds beauty to both the vegetable and flower garden. There are several varieties, including Italian Flat Leaf and Curly. They can be grown in pots if you have limited space. Dill and parsley will attract and feed the beautiful Eastern Black Swallowtail, and can feed its caterpillars as well. - Brenda Weaver

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I find it weird that my two dogs, "Shep" and "Bull," can eat just about anything (I have to hide all the pet food), while my cat "Trudy" will turn up her nose at most food. And although she's perfectly healthy, sometimes she gets sick after eating wet or fresh food. Why? – Sarah in Madison, Wisconsin

DEAR SARAH: Cats' eating behaviors have long been a source of curiosity for both pet owners and the scientific community. Why do they turn their nose up at certain foods and chow down on others? Why do they sometimes throw up after eating? Why do they gnaw on grass when they're meat-eaters?

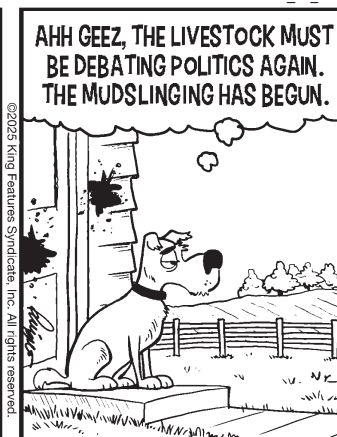

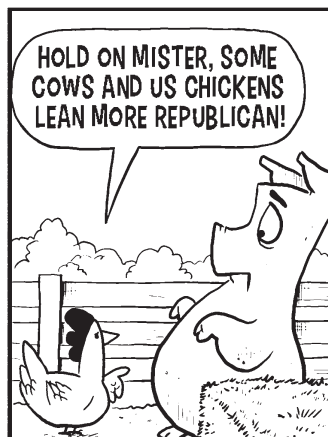

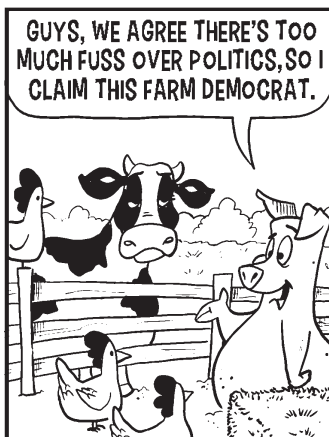

The answer is: It's complicated, and no one is entirely sure. A 2015 study, for example, found that cats have some genes that are more commonly possessed by herbivores (animals that eat only plants, like cows). These particular genes help them detect bitter flavors, alerting them to potentially poisonous plants.

This research opens a new avenue into understanding why cats are more picky about their food than dogs – also meat-eaters – tend to be. If cats are detecting a bitter taste in their food then they may be less inclined to eat it. And, a bitter taste also may trigger a vomiting response to safeguard against ingesting what is perceived to be poison.

The study's results could lead to changes in how commercial producers formulate their cat food. Whether that is a good thing remains to be seen.

In the meantime, feeding a finicky cat remains a trial-and-error process. Try small amounts of different foods – dry, wet and fresh – and note Trudy's likes and dislikes. ©2025 King Features Synd., Inc.

Strange But True

by Lucie Winborne

- America's first dentist, John Baker, trained Paul Revere to be a dentist.
- Ancient pagan cultures such as the Celts believed that benevolent, helpful spirits lived in trees. Knocking on tree trunks roused a spirit for protection, which led to the saying "knock on wood."

- Toothpaste works well as a silver polish. Wet your silver, plop a little non-gel toothpaste on it and rub gently with a damp, clean rag. Rinse well with a separate rag, and buff dry. Then just step back and let it shine.
- If you've ever oversalted soup, don't worry; here's a great tip to recover your meal. Just cut a single potato into several large slices. Add them to the soup, and they will soak up the extra salt. Remove before serving.
